Pachamama is celebrated in the Northwest region of Argentina on August 1st. It is a very important day for people in this area, but it is not an official holiday. It is the end of the dry season. Farmers ask Pachamama, Mother Earth Goddess, to give them permission to plant seeds. Pacha is ready to accept gifts from her children: the best dishes, chichi, wine, coca and cigars.

The night before people get ready for the celebration. Sometimes children don't go to school to help adults make the dishes. In the morning, people wear traditional clothes and celebrate Pachamama.
