Strange Streetlamps

1 Read the story and answer the questions below:

Jenny was walking home late one night after a party at a friend's house. She was feeling tired and she really wanted to get to bed, so she walked under the big black ladder against the wall without thinking. She wasn't superstitious and she's never had any bad luck from these things.

So she continued walking but as she was passing under a streetlamp, it suddenly turned off. It was strange but not really a problem. When she was getting closer to the next streetlamp it also turned off. She thought it was weird but she wasn't scared. Yet.

When she arrived at the third streetlamp it turned off, too. Now she was scared. She looked back to where the ladder was and ... there was no ladder there! She crossed her fingers and started running and every time she passed under a streetlamp it turned off. She didn't stop until she got home. When she walked in through the front door the light turned on! She screamed... aaaagh!

- Where was the party? How was Jenny feeling after the party?
- What two things did she do connected with superstitions?
- What happened when she got to the first streetlamp?
- How many streetlamps did this happen to before she looked back?
- What did she see when she looked back?
- What happened when she walked into her house? How did she feel then?

2 Now listen to the rest of the story and answer the questions.

- Who was waiting for Jenny?
- Why did the light turn on?
- How did her mum know Jenny was coming?
- How did Jenny describe what happened to her?
- What did Jenny start to do?
- Who appeared?
- Did Jenny's parents know something about the ladder?

PAST PERFECT

When I had arrived home my husband asked me how my day had gone. I told him I had been very busy all day. This will give you an idea of my day.

By eight o'clock, I had already entered the office.

By nine o'clock, I had already read all my e-mail.

By ten o'clock, I had already answered all my telephone calls.

By eleven o'clock, I had already had my office meeting.

By twelve o'clock, I had already missed my break.

By one o'clock, I had already missed my lunch hour, as I had had to meet my boss.

By two o'clock, I had already spoken and met with our sales representatives.

By three o'clock, I had already missed my second break.

By four o'clock, I had written four reports.

By five o'clock, I had done all my work and was ready to go home, as I had finished everything I had to do.

By six o'clock, I had entered the heavy traffic.

By seven o'clock I had arrived home.

By seven o five I had had enough.

The good part to this story is that by seven ten, my husband had made me a wonderful supper, with candles and all.
